LOT 163.

AN EXTENSIVE AND REPRESENTATIVE COLLECTION OF 134 MONTEITH PUNCH GLASSES.

The Property of a Gentleman.

These glasses are frequently described as Jelly Glasses, Custard Glasses, Sweetmeat Glasses, Early Salts, or even Sucket Glasses; but Hartshorne refers to them as Monteith Punch Glasses, and there can be little doubt they were originally expressly designed to be used in conjunction with the Monteith Punch Bowl.

The comparatively large foot and total lack of stem enabled the glass to be hung, foot outwards, in the scollop of the rim of the Monteith Bowl, and there the glasses became practically wedged, so that the bowl could be carried in surrounded by the glasses. The rim of the bowl was frequently detachable, and could be set on the table with the glasses still hanging in it while the punch was brewed. (See A. Hartshorne, "Old English Glasses," page 254.)

The collection consists of—

Five Bristol Blue Glasses of three different types

Five Glasses, with square moulded bases, of four different types

Four Engraved Glasses of three different types

One pressed Glass, cut and engraved, with scolloped foot

Two cut Glasses of rather later date, with tears in knops

Two pressed Glasses, straight fluted, without decoration

One Glass, fluted and wreathen, giving basket work effect

Two pressed Glasses with curious feet

One straight fluted pressed Glass, with lipped rim

One early thumb pressed Glass of delicate design, with tears in knop; pronounced double ogee bowl and thumb pressed domed foot, slightly damaged

One rare shaped piece, with deep thumb pressing entirely covering bowl

One Glass, thumb pressed, with curiously large and heavy foot

One straight fluted Glass with scolloped foot

One thumb pressed Glass of unusual design

Two wreathen Glasses of extra heavy design, one damaged

One pair very small wreathen Glasses, pronounced double ogee bowls

One pair wreathen Glasses, very pronounced double ogee bowls

One pair and four other straight fluted Glasses, with plain feet

One pair Waterford thumb pressed reticulated glasses, deep pressing, small, with scolloped feet

Two small thumb pressed Glasses with curiously scolloped feet

Four small thumb pressed Glasses with peculiar-shaped bowls and plain feet

Fifty-one Glasses with thumb pressed reticulated double ogee bowls and plain feet, no two specimens alike

Thirty Glasses with thumb pressed reticulated double ogee bowls and scolloped feet, no two specimens alike

One Glass, straight fluted, with cut pyramidical decoration above

Four pressed Glasses, cut and engraved

IN ALL, 134 GLASSES, PROBABLY UNEQUALLED AS A COLLECTION FOR QUALITY AND VARIETY.
